LONG ISLAND HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

ITS OBJECTS AND WORK, WITH LIST OF MEMBERS.

THE principal object of the Society is the formation of a Library of Reference, complete as possible in whatever relates to the general history of this country and continent, as well as to the local and family history of the several States of the Union: comprising also the best books in all departments of knowledge, and in particular those works, which, on account of their extent or cost, are not suitable for circulating libraries or for ordinary private collections.

Special efforts are made to secure books, documents, manuscripts, and historical memorials, relating to Long Island, as well as specimens representing its Natural History.

The Society holds stated meetings, at which papers are read or addresses delivered upon topics not discussed by ordinary lecturers.

Even a partial accomplishment of the plans of the Society will require ample means, and occupy years; but the necessary equipment for a broad foundation has been secured, and the collections now displayed in its Library and Museum indicate how useful and attractive the institution can be made.

It is an interesting fact that the rapid and steady progress of the Society is principally due to the active coöperation of its members; and that while other societies, kindred with this, have been enriched by bequest, this Society has been enabled to prosecute its work mainly by the liberality and efforts of the living.

It is the purpose of this letter to briefly describe the institution, in order to induce the residents of Brooklyn, whose tastes are in harmony with the objects of the Society, to call and examine the collections now at their service for the purpose of study, or as means of culture and general information.

The building erected by the Society occupies three lots at the corner of Pierrepont and Clinton streets, and contains a Hall for its meetings, a Library with ante-rooms adjoining, one of these for the exclusive use of ladies, and a Museum.

The Library is open day and evening, and the Museum is open during the day and upon evenings when meetings of the Society are held. Members have the use of the Library, and access to the Museum, and two admissions are sent to them to every meeting of the Society. The privileges of the use of the Library and access to the Museum are extended to the ladies in the families of members, as well as to the young gentlemen of those families under the age of twenty-one.

The Library, in proportion to its extent, contains an unusual number of extensive and costly illustrated works relating to art, antiquities, and natural history; among these are volumes of engravings from paintings in the Madrid, Dresden, and other European galleries; the Cabinet du Roi, a collection of engravings in forty-nine folio volumes, executed at the expense of Louis XIV., for presentation to distinguished persons; Baron

Taylor's "Architectural Antiquities and Picturesque Views of France," in twenty-seven folio volumes; the great works of Lepsius, Champollion, and Prisse D'Avennes, on the monuments of Egypt; as well as the "Description de l'Egypte," published by order of Napoleon; "Audubon's Birds of America," in four large folio volumes, with text in five volumes; "Silvestre's Universal Palæography," and many similar works.

These works are only mentioned as representative of one class of books specially suited to a reference library, but the Society's collections are not limited to any class; on the contrary, the plan is to gather into its library whatever any intelligent reader may wish to consult, excluding, of course, as far as possible, books of temporary interest or value.

The Library is strong in works relating to American history, particularly to the local history of the several States, and contains an excellent collection of American family genealogies. The biographical department is also large; one division of it, that of American biography, is maintained, in part, by a fund given for that specific purpose by the late Mrs. Maria Cary. Mrs. Urania B. Humphrey has recently begun a very interesting division in the same department by presenting a large collection of the biographies of distinguished women. Mrs. Humphrey has also presented a valuable collection of volumes on the history, theory, and practice of music. Another fund has been established by Miss Caroline and Miss Ellen Thurston, in memory of their brother, Mr. Frederick G. Thurston, for a department of the history of Egypt, the Holy Land, and Greece.

The Library contains some of the most important collective series relating to early geographical discovery and history, such as that of De Bry, the first series, in Latin, relating to America; the collections of Hakluyt, the publications of the Hakluyt Society, and similar works. In English history, besides most of the best general histories, and many valuable county and town histories, it contains the splendid series of Chronicles and Memorials of Great Britain, complete to date, as well as the Calendars of State Papers, both published by the British Government; the publications of the Record Commissioners, and such works as Dugdale's "Monasticon," in nine folio volumes; Billings' "Baronial and Ecclesiastical Antiquities," both works richly illustrated; the Camden Society's publications, and an excellent collection of works on the history of India and the British dominion there.

In the department relating to France, besides the splendid work by Baron Taylor, already mentioned, the Society possesses the collection by Bouquet, in twenty-three folio volumes, of the early historians of that country; many of the best standard histories, and series of memoirs, such as Petitot's and Guizot's collections, in many volumes.

Of other divisions relating to general history, those of Greece, Italy, Holland, China, Egypt, and the Holy Land are well supplied with leading standard works, and there are many important volumes relating to countries not here referred to.

Nearly all departments of thought and research are represented; those of religion, art, science, philosophy, political economy, and general literature are already well advanced, and the collections comprise many important series of volumes, such as the Sacred Books of the East, Trübner's Oriental Series, sets of the ancient classics, in the original as also in translations; the "Acta Sanctorum," "Histoire de la Littérature de la France," and similar extended works. Important sets of American and English periodicals are also in the Library; such as the "Portfolio," the "Art Journal," the quarterly and monthly literary journals, and files, in volumes, of important newspapers. There is also a good supply of dictionaries, encyclopædias, bibliographical works, and other necessary books for general reference.

The most important service of a reference library, such as the Historical Society is forming, is to supply, in full measure, useful books in all departments of research and thought; history, art, science, and good letters; books that most students and lovers of reading cannot buy; in short, to keep at the service of everybody books that the richest can scarcely afford, monumental works, which are recognized sources of knowledge, as well as the literature of the present and of the past.

The Museum, which occupies the upper floor of the building, is already attractive, and is growing rapidly.

The Society has an endowment of one hundred thousand dollars, which, together with the dues of its members and the rental of its lecture-hall, are the sources of its income.

It would not be possible within the reasonable limits of a circular letter to give an adequate description of the collections of the Society, in its Library and Museum; the Executive Committee therefore invites you, as well as the members of your family, to visit the institution and examine them. Every part of the building and collections is open for personal inspection, and the Librarian will take pleasure in displaying the literary treasures and the objects of interest now in the possession of the Society. Three of the assistants in the Library are ladies, and a lady is in charge of the Museum. No introductions are necessary. Ladies and gentlemen can call without ceremony, and they will have every facility for examination extended to them.

In behalf of the Executive Committee,

THOMAS E. STILLMAN,

Chairman.

GEORGE HANNAH,

Librarian.

The Terms of Membership are: for Annual Members, $10 the first year, and thereafter $5 a year; or, for Life Membership, $100, in full for all fees and dues.

Application for membership can be made through any Member of the Society, or to the Librarian.
